

MADERO MAKES HIMSELF PROVISIONAL PRESIDENT

URGES HIS FOLLOWERS TO COM-MIT NO OVERT ACTS AGAINST AMERICANS.

BATTLES ARE BEING FOUGHT

Chihuahua Said to Be Invested by Hostile Forces—Many Fugitives Seek Opportunity to Join Rebels.
[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Ciudad Juarez, Nov. 23.—Francisco I. Madero has proclaimed himself "President of the provisional government of Mexico," and administers his followers not to commit overt acts against Americans nor to damage property of foreigners. Madero's proclamation is being generally circulated today throughout Northern Mexico.

Want Opportunity.
Laredo, Tex., Nov. 23.—It is said on the beat of authority that two hundred revolutionists are camped about thirty miles from this city on the American side and awaiting an opportunity to cross into Mexico. On the Mexican side a body of troops fully armed, are anxiously awaiting the attempt to invade Mexico. If the two forces clash there is bound to be a serious battle.

Returning North.
Among the passengers passing through this city today enroute north was Arnold Shanklin, American consul general in Mexico. Shanklin reports everything quiet along the line of the national railway between the Capital and Laredo and says he heard absolutely nothing of any recent fighting enroute north.

All in Fighting.
El Paso, Tex., Nov. 23.—At 5:30 this morning there was full in fighting at Tornon with the government forces in full control of the city. The wild scenes of disorder marked the night and the death list is estimated at sixty or seventy, largely from the insurgent side.

Lack Organization.
The revolutionists lack organization and leadership and their supply of arms and ammunition is limited.

Fighting Ceased.
Fighting has already ceased at Chihuahua. The insurgents are holed outside the city and have control of a large territory.

Still in Control.
The government forces and properties has been grossly exaggerated.

No Violations.
Washington, D. C., Nov. 23.—In response to a request from the department of justice which is charged with the responsibility of seeing to it that no use as a base of war in connection with the Mexican revolution, the War department today instructed General Hoyt, commander of the department of Texas, to respond to requests from United States marshals for assistance and troops in preventing violations of neutrality.

Are in Control.
El Paso, Texas, Nov. 23.—Advices seemingly authentic show that today the federal government again in control, every town in Northern Mexico, save perhaps Madero, from which nothing can be obtained. The Revolutionists are disappearing into the mountains.

Still Fighting.
A late telephone advice from Tornon report many were killed on both sides, pouring in by the hundreds and unless the government's troops can secure aid the city will be captured.

Rebels Retreat.
Laredo, Texas, Nov. 23.—Reports of an engagement today between federal and rebel troops at Santa Isabel, State of Chihuahua in which the revolutionists were forced to retreat, have been received here.

PARTY DOCTRINES WERE DISCUSSED

AT MEETING OF SOCIAL UNION CLUB LAST EVENING AT THE Y. M. C. A.

PRINCIPLES OF SOCIALISM

Were Expounded and Aims and Purposes Explained By Carl D. Thompson Of Milwaukee.

Although the excitement of election day has passed politics retained supremacy at the meeting of Social Union Club at the Y. M. C. A. auditorium last evening. The chief address of the evening was delivered by Carl D. Thompson, city clerk of Milwaukee, on the subject of the Social Democracy and his enunciation of the socialist doctrine in an eloquent and fervent speech held his audience for over an hour.

Before the regular program was taken up a topic was chosen for the January meeting. "Methods of Municipal Taxation" was the one decided upon and Dr. J. W. Langhlin was selected as leader.

In introducing the question for the evening's discussion, "Political Parties: Their Purposes and Underlying Principles" the speaker, H. S. Lavejoy, stated that in the recent campaign personalities and party platforms had played a large part; but now after the storm of the fray had subsided, it was well to look at the various parties with a view of ascertaining their real purposes and foundations.

A. E. Matheson treated the subject, "The Republican Party from a Conservative Standpoint." There had been some confusion, Mr. Matheson said, regarding the meaning of the terms progressive and conservative. If progression meant to trample and destroy the constitution, to imply disrespect for the law and to break completely from the traditions of the past, he did not stand for progression. But if progression meant a gradual advancement and moving forward as we ought to from generation to generation, building into and profiting by the experience of the past, then he was for progression.

"Our present political methods are to be deplored. In our campaigning today the issues and the party principles are avoided and the entire campaign is devoted to the lauding of some man to the skies and 'knocking' his opponents to the earth. We lack a definite purpose and it is a sad fact that people will avoid the issues and submit to the domination of one man to the extent that a dead man may be put into office.

The name of Speaker Cannon had been used much in the past campaign and one of the chief arguments of many of the congressmen was that they were against that man. As a man recognized and now that he is getting old and somewhat behind the times why not let him pass into the background quietly and peacefully?"

The tariff has been a bone of contention but whether the law just passed is good or bad, a great deal of credit is due to President Taft for the courage to attack a proposition which has been the undoing of every other administration that ever attempted to handle it. Taft is endeavoring to serve the whole country and not any one section and he deserves the hearty and enthusiastic support of every loyal citizen.

Charles J. Hendricks spoke in behalf of the Democratic Party. He reviewed the history of that party, and emphasized some of the things which it had stood for. Its foundation had been built on the everlasting principles of democracy and liberty and to the firm adherence to its beliefs was due its endurance and strength. It had opposed the furtherance of any measure which had tended to make for the benefit of a few of certain class; consequently tariff for revenue only, simplicity and economy in administration had been some of the things which the Democrats had stood for. Not only the principles but the character of its leaders has been a factor in continuing existence of the Democratic party and as long as liberty and equality are at the back of Democratic doctrine, so long will that party be a power in the nation.

Jesse Carlo dealt with the subject of Progressive Republicanism. He designated the present progressive Republican agitation as a protest against old conditions. It is a protest against the monopolies and the legislative favoritism which has been shown toward them. It is a protest also against the old political machine and the corruption which has been attributed to them. The progressive movement has been an attempt to conform the politics of the nation to the existing conditions and new measures and new alignments have been found necessary. It is an attempt to live with the times, and not behind the times.

Carl D. Thompson with the subject of the Social Democratic Party, brought out in an ardent and forceful address the principles and doctrines upon which that party stood, some of these forms they advocate and the means of their accomplishment. It was a clear, instructive presentation and there were none who heard it who were not impressed.

"Nine million men," said Mr. Thompson, "have already voted the socialist ticket. The socialist party is the greatest organization and the greatest movement that this earth has ever seen. Its scope is international; thirty millions of people have been affected by its work and its motives and achievements have made it great. It has 470 representatives in the national parliaments of the world, every progressive nation having its representatives in the congress of the United States which has now fallen into line with the rest. Some of the larger cities of the world have felt the effect of the socialist influence. Germany, England, Austria, Italy, Russia, have all experienced important changes due to this mighty movement.

"The underlying principles of socialism are concerned with a philosophy of history and a understanding of the life of mankind. Three doctrines are preached, (1) the doctrine of economic determinism, (2) of surplus value, and (3) the principle of class struggle.

"Economic determinism is the theory that in order to find what are the impelling motives in life it is necessary to look at the economic interests. The economic struggle for existence has been determined by the lives of men and which it has on the masses of the laboring people. The doctrine of surplus value is the theory that those who have done the actual labor and toil in the economic world have not received a just return for their work but have been exploited by the capitalist class. And the class struggle principle is the fact that they have been exploited and they will naturally work together for a remedy to their condition.

"There have been two great aims in the work of socialism, and the first aim has been the establishment of democracy in government. Socialism wants a form of government in which all the people have a chance at the control of affairs. They aim at the quickest and most ready expression of the people's right. Along this line the universal franchise is advocated and the socialist can see no sufficient reason for denying women the right to vote. Other things which are necessary for establishment of the people's power are the initiative, referendum and recall so that the legislative organs will respond as quickly as possible to the people's will. A second legislative chamber is unnecessary and we should have some effective means of control on our supreme court and not allow it to limit the will of the people and place a block in the path of progress.

"The second thing which socialism aims at is equality of opportunity. A comparison of the family of the rich and the poor will show that this is lacking at present. Education is the remedy for this condition and an elaborate and extensive system should be worked out so that every child will have an equal chance. The question of industrial equalization also comes in at this point. We have profited the resources which God has given us and allowed them to be monopolized by a few people. We need to realize that to make money is not the object of life but to make men. A few men should not be allowed to exploit the masses for their own benefits but the utilities which we publicly use should be taken over and operated economically for the benefit of all. Our national resources should be improved and safeguarded for the benefit of the whole nation. It would process, this taking over the industries which are now used to exploit the people, but it could finally be accomplished and the equalization of opportunity would be consummated."

Ames, Iowa, Visitors: Seven of the faculty and students of the agricultural college at Ames, Ia., arrived here last evening to inspect local stock farms and were quartered at the Grand Hotel. The personnel was: W. J. Kennedy, M. Chasoday, C. B. Gable, L. C. Compkins, E. C. Mulford, P. R. Long, and P. S. Shearer.

A GREAT SOUL PASSED

INTO LIGHT.

The most strenuous worker and thinker in the world's activities passed for one eventful hour this week as the greatest soul of our century passed into the light of the eternal world. Leo Nicolaevitch (Count Tolstoy), who died in a peasant's hut, came the nearest in modern times to those universal intellects like Michael

Angelo, Shakespear, Demark, and Gladstone; but he was distinguished from them in his return to the primitive simplicity of the teachings of Christ, and the personal remunera-tions of a St. Francis.

Only yesterday will be able to estimate aright the real nature and practical results of his teachings, but only the most prejudiced can remain blind to the social and moral significance of his spirit and conduct.

Russia's greatest writer, his "War and Peace," and "Anna Karenina," take their place among the masterpieces of the creative imagination;

but it is not as a literary artist, nor as a religious philosopher, nor even as a social reformer that his name is

with his weakest, poorest brother.
He came nearest in modern times to the imitation of Christ of any human life.
He was willing to be excommunicated
even for the liberty of teaching, for in such only could he see the way to the amelioration of the lot of the poor. He would have suffered imprisonment and banishment but for the greatness of his name which inspired the Russian government with wholesome fear. Among the brightest stars in the galaxy of the nineteenth century the name of Tolstoy will shine pre-eminent, for he incarnated perhaps more than any other of his illustrous children, the passion of humanity.

This fitting tribute to the memory of Count Tolstoy is from the pen of Dr. David Denton. It expresses the sentiment of Christendom, as well as the sentiment of the tolling masses of all lands, for the grand old man whose life was a sacrifice for humanity.

THANKSGIVING.

It wasn't much of a home, the little one story red building, hid away in the trees by the country roadside, but it was home, and as the boy climbed down from the trunk at the wayside station two miles away, at three o'clock on Thanksgiving morning, many years ago, and started down the road, a song was in his heart, and the old place never seemed so dear, as when he stood at the gate, half an hour later, and took in the familiar surroundings.

The same trees, the same old barn, with all its boyhood associations, the same fields stretching away in the frosty moonlight, where he had followed the plow, and graduated to seek fame and fortune in the larger arena.
This, his first home-coming, was occasion for thanksgiving, mingled with sorrow. The father would greet him presently, with glad surprise, but the mother, his comrade and best friend, had passed on.

As he took in the old home, memory painted a picture of the patient sufferer as he sat in the rocking chair
by the window, through long months of weary inactivity, while he, the lover, and boy companion, ministered to her wants. Sacred memories for the quiet voice and pleasant smile, lingered with him, exerting a potent influence and helping to hold him steady.
All over the land today, trains are speeding in all directions, bearing no happier passengers than the boy who counts the mile-posts as he speeds on his way to the old home and thanksgiving. It matters not how lowly the home is, for as someone said, not long ago:

"Home is not a thing of timber,
Trick and mortar, lath and stone,
Built by plan with saw and hammer
For man's dwelling place alone.

"Home of finer stuff is builded—
Human hearts and love poured free;
Little thoughts and deeds of kindness,
I for thee and thee for me.

"Home is where the heart is, be it
Palace grand or simple cot;
All the wealth of all the nations
Without love may build it not."

To this class of homes, and they are the average class, the Thanksgiving reunion is significant, and especially to the boy who chafed under restraint and wearied of monotony.
His range of vision may not be large enough to take in the long list of blessings which are cause for general rejoicing. All that he is willing to leave to the preacher. He is just glad, clear down to his feet, that he is home again.
And so today, boys and girls of all ages are hurrying home to join in Thanksgiving festivities. It might not be out of place to thank God for forbearers who have been wise enough to preserve the old home by keeping out of divorce courts and bankruptcy.

SOCIALISM A DREAM

The Social Union club was treated to a dissertation on Socialism last evening by the newly elected city clerk of Milwaukee, Carl D. Thompson, a most pleasant and forceful speaker.
He captured his audience from the start by his intelligence and earnestness and because he had a message which absorbed him, his appeal commanded close attention and at first flush his arguments seemed convincing.

Socialism is so ideal, that many of its doctrines are captivating. The protection of children, better educational advantages for the masses, improved sanitary conditions for industrial toilers, the brotherhood of a common humanity which recognizes every man as his brother's keeper and banishes armies and navies because of universal peace. These and numerous other things which have to do with the betterment of social and civil life, touch a popular chord, and as they are vividly portrayed by speakers like Mr. Thompson, every hearer says, "Yes, so mote it be."

But the weakness of this alluring part of the creed, in that it anticipates the golden age where every man and woman will represent a moral unit dedicated to purity and goodness, and makes no allowance for selfishness or depravity.
The most visionary part of this old world dogma however, was set forth by Mr. Thompson in the picture he painted of the "good time coming,"
where the people-owned the public utilities, including the railroads and transportation companies, as well as the world's industries.

This would give to every toiler his share in what he produced, increase wages, provide sick benefits and old age pensions, and do away with the capitalist class which now curses the country.

All this could be brought about in seven years, if the United States government would appropriate the $500,

000,000 now being spent to maintain the army and navy.

The first year the people could buy a few railroads, and in a year or two clean up the transportation field. Then they could start in on the factories, and about the sixth year, when everything had been acquired, they could go west, buy a tract of land and provide every homeless family with a home.

The seventh year would be the year of jubilee, when everybody would rest and go to the seashore, for the railroads and steamboats would belong to the people and they could afford to run them a year for pleasure.

There is another chapter, outlined by a New York socialist, a time ago, which goes Mr. Thompson one better.
He advocated a change of employment every thirty days. The man with a pick would put on his Sunday suit and change work with the banker for a month, thus giving all an equal opportunity.

Socialism is a dream too fantastic to ever be realized. Its disciples are honest but visionary. Many things they advocated for the betterment of humanity are coming into use, as time advances, because the world is growing better, and more will be accomplished, along humanitarian lines, as men learn to appreciate life with all its significance.

THE POET PHILOSOPHER

By WALT MASON.

(Copyright, 1909, by George

Matthew Adams.)

Don't talk about the prize you'll win, or how you will pursue it, for bona fide are like the clank
A FEW of tin; don't talk—get DOWN and do it. Don't say you'll cut the habits out,
that makes your friends uneasy;
Just turn your conduct face about—for talk is cheap and wheezy. About your ready clothes don't talk, and say you'll soon be tony; go get the sort of duds that knock—for problems are phony. Don't make some wild and foolish break and then beg people's pardon; such conduct fairly makes you plant you in the garden. Don't try to tell a funny tale to friends who may be busy, or they will say you'd be in jail if peddlers were not dizzy.

Don't talk about your own concerns to one who's in a hurry; he doesn't care three tinkers' dums about your woe and worry. Don't blow a damp, hang-over breath into your neighbors'
faces, or they will wish that Colonel Death would take you where his place is. Don't talk, unless the thing you'd say is truly worth the trouble; for work's the stuff that puts up hay, and talk is but a bubble.

FOOTBALL CONTESTS IN WEST AND SOUTH

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 23.—Hundreds of followers of the University of Kansas and the University of Missouri are preparing to invade Kansas City tomorrow for the annual gridiron duel which will reward football honors to one or the other of the rival State institutions. It will be the twentieth consecutive year that the two eleven have met. Of the nineteen games played Kansas has won fourteen and Missouri four. In 1900 the game resulted in a tie.

Virginia and North Carolina Richmond, Va., Nov. 23.—Lovers of the gridiron sport in two states are on edge in anticipation of the annual game to be played here tomorrow between eleven of the University of Virginia and the University of North Carolina. Ever since 1892, with the exception of three or four years in which no game has been played, the football contest between the neighboring State University teams has been a Thanksgiving day attraction in Richmond and has never failed to attract large crowds. The rivalry between the two institutions is intense and at every game two armies of loyal followers always turn out to root for the victory of their favorites. Virginia has the better of it in the record of the past. Of fourteen games played the Charlottesville team has won ten victories to four scored by the North Carolina team. In 1902 the teams played a tie game.

Painless Dentistry

My Painless work is reaching out tremendously among the neighboring cities. Just for illustration, on last Saturday I had patients from Afton, Evansville, Pontville and two from Clinton, one from Minnesota, besides several from 4 to 8 miles on either side of town.

Today I had one from Montana who wanted all on a visit here before having her dental work done.

I also extracted two teeth for a timid patient just now who—like all the rest—said, "Dr. Richards, you never hurt a bit."

TOE-BRANDS ON LOCAL TURKEYS LEAD TO ARREST

J. L. Lewis Brought Here by Automobile From Green County to Answer to Charge of Wholesale Sale Theft.

J. L. Lewis, owner of a hundred acre farm located in Green county, three miles west of the town of Mac, pulled into town here by automobile shortly after eleven o'clock this morning to answer to a complaint based on circumstantial evidence which Mr. and Mrs. Charles Schultz who live in Magnolia have filed against him, charging the theft of twenty-one turkeys worth $51.52. He was accompanied by Constable John Conant, who served the warrant and arrested a plea of not guilty. His preliminary examination was set for two o'clock Friday afternoon, Nov. 25, and bail was fixed at $500. Mr. Lewis had no friends here upon whom he could call to furnish bonds and did not have the necessary cash to put up a security. For the time being, therefore, he is occupying the compartment adjoining the chief of police's office. District Attorney J. L. Fisher and Constable Conant took the automobile and expected to start back to the Lewis farm on a tour of investigation this afternoon.

For four years running Mr. and Mrs. Schultz have been robbed in a very systematic fashion of their turkeys and poultry. Last season 125 chickens were taken in a single raid. In order to protect themselves this season they had the left toe-nail of the left toe of each young bird amputated early in the spring to serve as a means of identification in case of theft.

Birds in Local Market?
Chief Appleby in the course of an investigation discovered that dressed turkeys with this peculiar marking were on sale at George W. Yahn's meat market and that Lute McCoy, living five miles south of Evansville, had been buying for Mr. Yahn and had picked up a consignment of the birds with the left-toe markings at the Lewis farm in Green county. Mr. and Mrs. Schultz came to Janesville yesterday afternoon and went with Chief Appleby to the Yahn market.

That's Big Betsy!
Mrs. Schultz, upon looking over the last-out freshly picked out numerous birds which she thought she could identify as her property. "And that's big Betsy!" she exclaimed with conviction as she designated the dressed remains of a large gobbler which apparently closely resembled, at least, one of her birds which had borne a feminine name regardless of sex. Mr. Yahn went through the stock on hand and laid out nineteen birds which had the toes of their left feet clipped in the same peculiar fashion. Only sixteen of these could be claimed by Mr. and Mrs. Schultz, and that makes the circumstantial evidence a trifle confusing.

So Marked His Fowl.
Mr. Lewis showed no hesitancy in answering various questions. He said that the Schultz people were strangers to him; that he did not know how they looked or where they lived. On his premises this season he had kept forty-four turkeys. In order that he might tell his fowls from those owned by his neighbor, Mr. Dumphy, he had marked all of the young turkeys by clipping the nail of the outside toe of the left foot in every instance. Twenty-four had been sold to Mr. McCoy and all of these were marked with the exception of an old 27-pound gobbler. Three old turkeys, unmarked, had been sold to Thomas Francis; three of the young ones had been given to his daughter; and he had four still on hand.

Prisoner Undismayed.
Mr. Lewis maintained perfect composure, showing no perturbation whatsoever even at the prospect of spending some time behind locked doors if he should be unable to find a bondsman. The casual announcement by the court that a theft of these dimensions might mean a prison sentence for the guilty party seemed to concern him not at all. He was somewhat impatient because the examination could not be held at once but became good natured again when it was explained that witnesses would have to be summoned and that the summons could not be served by telephone.

At top, east erected by the Georgia society of the Colonial Dames of America on the spot where James Oglethorpe, founder of the colony of Georgia, first pitched his tent. At bottom, heroic bronze statue of General James Edward Oglethorpe, founder and for 30 years governor of the colony of Georgia, to be unveiled November 23.

concourse of people, the handsome monument erected in memory of Gen. James Edward Oglethorpe, the founder of the colony of Georgia, was unveiled today. The ceremony of unveiling occurred in Chippewa Square, where the memorial to the celebrated English soldier and colonizer has been erected. Surrounding the monument were great stands to accommodate the many officials and guests invited to take part in the exercises. Included among the latter were several prominent members of the British Embassy at Washington and official representatives of the States of Georgia, Florida and South Carolina.

The exercises were preceded by a brilliant military pageant. In the procession were soldiers from the Cruiser Seventeenth Infantry from Fort McPherson, a squadron of cavalry from Fort Oglethorpe, three companies of Coast Artillery from Fort Screven and several regiments of the National Guard of Georgia.

The monument consists of an imposing pile of masonry surmounted by a bronze statue of Gen. Oglethorpe designed by Daniel French. The entire monument was in the neighborhood of $40,000, which was subscribed by the state of Georgia, the city of Savannah and several patriotic societies.

General James Oglethorpe, in honor of whose memory the monument has been erected, came to America in 1773 to found a colony of Protestants, with a special view to providing for young men just starting in life and with no influence or property. With thirty-five families he landed in South Carolina, where he left the colonists while he explored the country between Carolina and Florida. This section was claimed by both England and Spain, but Oglethorpe made a purchase from the Creek Indians, from that portion that is now the city of Savannah. It was Georgia he who granted the patent for founding the colony and it was named for him.

Aside from his career in America the life of Oglethorpe was full of picturesque incidents. Born in the reign of William III, in 1696, he knew many of the famous men of the next century intimately.

He began his services as a soldier under Marlborough, and was an aide of Prince Eugene in his war against the Turks. He sat many years in parliament and was distinguished in society and a friend of letters. He lived long enough to see the success of his American colony, his death occurring at his home in England in 1785.

30 Years of Success

The Smith Drug Co. Offer a Remedy for Catarrh. The Medicine Costs Nothing If It Fails.

When a medicine effects a successful treatment in a very large majority of cases, and when we offer that medicine on our own personal guarantee that it will cost the user nothing if it does not completely relieve catarrh, it is only reasonable that people should believe us, or at least put our claim to a practical test when we take all the risk. These are facts which we want the people to substantiate. We want them to try Rexall Muc-Tone, a medicine prepared from a prescription of a physician with whom catarrh was a specialty, and who has a record of thirty years of enviable success to his credit.

We receive many good reports about Rexall Muc-Tone than we do of all other catarrh remedies sold in our store, and if more people only knew what a thoroughly dependable remedy Rexall Muc-Tone is, it would be the only catarrh remedy we would have any demand for.

Rexall Muc-Tone is quickly absorbed and by its therapeutic effect tends to dislodge and cleanse the entire mucous membrane tract, to destroy and remove the parasites which injure the membrane, to soothe the irritation and heal the soreness, stop the mucous discharge, build up strong, healthy tissue and relieve the blood and system of diseased matter. Its influence is toward stimulating the mucous cells, adding direction and improving nutrition until the whole body vibrates with healthy activity. In a comparatively short time it brings about a noticeable gain in weight, strength, good color and feeling of buoyancy.

We urge you to try Rexall Muc-Tone, beginning a treatment today. At any time you are not satisfied, simply come and tell us, and we will quickly return your money without question or quibble. We have Rexall Muc-Tone in two sizes, 50 cents and $1.00. Remember you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Janesville only at our store, The Rexall Store, The Smith Drug Co.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

by RUTH CAMERON.

A WELL KNOWN magazine in its September issue published a list of all the girls' boarding schools which had advertised in its pages during the last year.

Appalled at the length of the list I took the time and trouble to count it.

There were 176.

Think of that.

And those figures represent, of course, just the schools that advertised in one magazine.

They do not include the schools that advertised in the hundreds of other magazines in the United States.

They do not include the schools which do not advertise at all.

Perhaps you wonder why I said "appalled" above.

Perhaps you wonder why I mention this list any way.

I'll tell you. Just this. Those figures give us a little idea of the tremendous extent to which the American mother is getting the habit of turning her young daughters over to strangers to bring up.

A friend of mine wrote me last summer to ask if I could give her any advice as to a good boarding school to which she might send her fourteen-year-old daughter to prepare her for college.

I wrote back to inquire just what duties made it impossible for her to keep that daughter—a headstrong, sensitive, brilliant little creature, as much in need of the guidance that love alone can give as any girl ever was—right where she belonged, under her own wing.

I haven't heard from her since. I am afraid she was offended at my plain speaking.

But I would do it again.

I am a firm believer in sending the seventeen or eighteen year old girl away to college. I believe that the advantages of a girl of that age deriving from looking out for herself, during her own stockings, making her own decisions, ordering her own life, outweigh the disadvantages—and I admit there are plenty of these—of college life.

But to send a girl twelve or thirteen or fourteen years old away from home—to give to outsiders this most plastic and sensitive period of her life, to trust to strangers that most delicate process, the molding of girlhood into womanhood, to be separated from a child at the time when so many instincts are awakening, so many wonders are demanding satisfaction—well I can scarcely understand the mother who could do it.

And yet by the showing of 176 schools advertising in a single magazine it looks as if there must be plenty of such women.

And just think, one of these schools actually offered to take girls from kindergarten age to college.

One hears many protests against the way in which the wealthy mother gives over the care of her little baby to a nursemaid or trained nurse.

Personally I don't think she does as much harm or runs as much risk as the mother who is willing to find in the open arms of the boarding school a solution of her difficulties in molding her young daughter's mind and character.

Do you?

FRESH AIR FOR CHILDREN . . .

By MARY RUSSELL.

The outdoor schools for children grow in favor. The results are beginning to show in unmistakable terms.

Children who have suffered with colds and pneumonia, who have been stupid and dull, are making fine grades and showing marked improvement in health.

Perhaps the day will come when the young of the human kind will be kept, like all other little animals in the open air. They will be taught to breathe deep and hold their heads up fearlessly in the face of King Disease.

It will be a long time coming, however. For economic reasons the old unventilated school houses will be over heated and under aired for many years, while the gradual change takes place. In the meantime we will build tubercular hospitals and sanatoriums, and houses for the diseased orphan.

Our economic system is bad when we willingly pay bills, and immediately contract the same old bills with their inevitable day of payment, but that is the way of clumsy corporation methods.

Since this is true, every mother—no matter the class—is the mother—should learn to breathe, herself, and teach her children the art, for art it is.

Half the people in the world own only a small part of their lung power habitually. They do not fill each cell even once a day. The natural consequences follow and the cells become quiescent. The person then is a fair specimen of "catarrh" any disease germ which comes along, like a fort, with half of its defenses down, the rest is easy to overcome.

One woman who has ideas, but little time to execute them, makes a practice of wrapping her children in blankets when they first get out of bed in the morning and taking them to an open window, where they take a certain number of deep long breaths, inhaling through the nostrils and holding the breath for a few moments before allowing it to slowly exhale through the mouth. After all it is apparently out a forcing movement is used to expel any that may still be left in some inactive coil. This is done regularly, and thoroughly cleanses and refreshes the lungs at least twice a day. When she began one of the children could not take a deep breath without pain. The poor little half-baked lungs would not expand without a protest, but now that child is growing rosy and has a decidedly good lung expansion.

The mother urges the children to remember to breathe deeply when walking. When she is with them she tries the rhythmic breathing and they all refresh their lungs in harmony. They are working for definite results and are beginning to feel that they are having some success. Their health and appetites have improved and they are in better condition than ever before in their lives.

If a child is amiable or headachy this will help. It is like the famous nostril pump. "Good for everything that ails you." From stomach trouble to nerves it will help the sufferer. It is within the reach of almost everybody. In some places the air is not good but even then it is better to build up and use the lungs to their fullest capacity. They will then have greater power to resist the evil germs with which the air is laden.

There are as many daisies, or half used, lungs in the country as in the city. Half the farmers grow old because they fail to use what nature gave them.

Begin now, old or young, and watch for the results. Not in a day may you conquer the habits of years. Not in a month will you eradicate the habit and learn wrought in 60 years of half breathing. But nature is kind and, in far less time than it required to wreak the damage, the repairs will be made if you work consistently and well.

Children, above all, should be taught the value of a deep breath for a child has no sadder handicap in life than lack of health.

Cookery Points

Pommes Parfaites.—Pare some firm cooking apples and cook them gently in a thin strip of sugar and water to which several thin strips of lemon rind have been added. Remove the apples and set them aside to drain and cool. When required for table arrange them in a deep glass dish surrounded by abundance of broken lemon jelly piled between and around the fruit. Cover each apple with a cone of stiffly whipped sweetened cream. Serve very cold.

Apple Cakes.—Make a stiff apple puree, sweeten to taste and stir in a little softened gelatin. Set aside to cool. Meanwhile cut some slices of sponge cake, trim them neatly and lay them on a flat dish. Moisten each with a little fruit juice, and when the apple puree is partly cool cover each sponge slice with a layer of puree, keeping the whole shapely. When quite cold arrange on lace paper doilies or in an ornamental dish. Ornament with cut angelica and crystallized violets.

Pommes Poirees.—Peel, core and quarter some good cooking apples. Cook them gently till tender and set aside till quite cold. Arrange them in a deep glass dish, cover with Devonshire cream, scatter chopped pistachio nuts over all and serve as cold as possible with water biscuits or sponge fingers.

Apple Salad.—Peel and core some eating apples of good flavor. Cut the fruit into thin slices. Arrange these in a pretty glass dish, sprinkle among the fruit some finely chopped nuts and shredded pineapple, dust with caster sugar, moisten with a little fruit juice and serve very cold.

Good Things to Know.
Watercress mixed with two or three tablespoonfuls of minced crisply fried bacon and dressed with vinegar, salt and pepper makes a tasty supper salad.

Boiled rice dropped by tablespoonfuls around fried chicken or meat ragout makes a dainty border. But the rice should not be pressed down into a solid mass, as many cooks unthinkingly do it. It is as important to lovers of rice that it be light and fluffy as it is that bread should be of such a quality.

For a cheese rice custard for a substantial dish or an entree, mash a cup of boiled rice to a paste, add an egg and a cupful of milk, season with a teaspoonful of butter, a tablespoonful or two of grated cheese, a little salt and pepper and turn into a baking dish or custard cups. Bake until the custard sets and the top is brown.

After Dinner Coffee.
Cafe noir is a strong decoction of black coffee which is served in small cups and is often partaken of unsweetened or merely flavored with a teaspoonful of brandy, or it may be sweetened with a spoonful of stiffly whipped cream on the top of each cup.

To produce Turkish coffee the coffee is put into its little metal pot in the proportion of two large tablespoonfuls of coffee, two lumps of sugar and half a pint of boiling water. Allow it to boil and bring it to a boil three times, after which pour it off into hot cups. This coffee should be served without milk or cream.

Bird's Nest Pudding.
Pare and core six large, sound apples, then put them into your well buttered biscuit pan; now mix together five heaping teaspoonfuls of flour, one scant teaspoonful of salt and one cupful of milk into a smooth paste, then add the yolks of three well beaten eggs; add the whites and another cup of milk; pour this over the apples, bake one hour; serve hot with hard sauce or sweetened whipped cream flavored with lemon extract.

Coffee Making.

A good cup of coffee is something that every girl and boy should know how to make, but, alas! there are many cooks, or so-called cooks, who do not know a good cup when they meet it. In the first place, one must have good coffee to prepare; one cannot expect to get a cup of the fragrant beverage from an inferior grade of coffee or coffee extract. Grind it just before using, and the aroma is not lost. Use a tablespoonful to a cup of boiling water, allowing one for each person and one for the pot. A small portion of beaten egg well mixed with the coffee and a little cold water will settle it if made in the old-fashioned way by boiling five minutes.

The drip coffee pot or the percolator are the best, as the grounds are never left in the coffee. When using a filter or percolator the coffee should be finely ground.

A cup of coffee at breakfast serves as a mild stimulant and is a valuable food adjunct, but it should never be given to a child or a dyspeptic.

In times of war coffee has been found to be more valuable than alcohol to keep up the endurance of the soldiers. Coffee acts as an antidote for various poisons.

Coffee should always be taken in moderation; its excessive use causes palpitation of the heart, insomnia and other nervous troubles.

Nowadays, when the processes of brewing coffee is done in the coffee houses, it is best to buy only in small quantities, as after brewing, unless carefully sealed, it soon deteriorates. If not bought in airtight cans it should be put into cans as soon as brought from the store.

Coffee is often adulterated in various ways, the most common is the use of chicory. This can easily be recognized by adding water to the mixture. Coffee will float and chicory will drop to the bottom.

Sometimes beans, peas and cereals are roasted and ground and used to adulterate coffee.

The stimulating property of coffee is due to the alkaloid caffeine and the essential oil. Like tea, it contains an astringent. Coffee is more stimulating than tea, as we use more of it.

SAME CONDITION FOUND IN COUNTY

TANGLE OVER SHERIFF FEES AND SALARY IN RACINE COUNTY.

MAY MAKE CHANGE HERE

Judge Tarrant of Milwaukee Renders Important Decision on Saturday Last.

Judge Warren D. Tarrant of Milwaukee, a nephew of Charles Tarrant of this city, has recently filed a decision which effects the sheriff of Racine county and may indirectly affect every sheriff in the state where the fee system has been abolished and a salary and traveling expense account been used instead. That Rock county may be in a similar plight as Racine finds itself, is thought possible by some who have studied the case decided by Judge Tarrant which in part is as follows:

"I hold that the contract between D. E. Roberts and the county of Racine is void and not in accordance with section 376, laws of 1907. For that reason judgment is ordered for the appellant in the sum of $156.70."

Roberts, sheriff of Racine county for two years, entered into a contract with the county to pay all expenses for conducting the office, such as boarding prisoners, doing washing, etc., for $2,500. In addition he received a salary of $2,000 per year. But the sheriff was to receive his actual expenses and disbursements for traveling on requisition out of the state.

In 1907 he presented a bill for $355 for such expenses to the county board. The board allowed it all, except $156, Roberts appealed.

The contract is held void as far as Gustav Dorrick, the present sheriff, is concerned and no contract can be made between the county and the sheriff in the future.

Dorrick during his term of office has traveled several thousand miles on requisition and is entitled to receive $4 per day and actual and necessary expenses, according to section 443 of the revised statutes.

The contract between Rock county and the sheriff provides that the sheriff on all trips outside the state receives his regular statutory fees which are $4.00 per day and actual and necessary expenses. However, it would seem that there would be no distinction between statutory fees which are provided for traveling outside the state and statutory fees which are provided for conveying prisoners to and from state institutions.

The present contract between Sheriff Schelbel and Rock county provides that the sheriff shall at his own expense convey all prisoners to all state institutions. "This contract has been severely criticized for the reason that every time the sheriff assists in securing any conviction he does so at his own expense in many cases amounting to as much as $50. There can be no doubt but what this system is wrong for the reason that under this system the less work the sheriff does the more money he has. It is not to be expected that the sheriff will give the same amount of time to ferret out or discover a crime when he knows that his efforts will only result in the expenditure out of his own pocket of $50 or $75, as he would if he were to receive mileage for transporting persons convicted. Under the decision of Judge Tarrant it would seem that Sheriff Schelbel would be entitled to mileage in taking prisoners to and from state institutions. District Attorney John L. Fisher, when interviewed regarding this matter, declined to express any opinion owing to the fact that he had not been able to secure a complete copy of Judge Tarrant's decision. It is probable that the entire matter will be put before the meeting of the county board at the January session.

Study. Study hard. But never let the thought enter your mind that study alone will lead you to the heights of usefulness and success.—Grover Cleveland.

TELEPHONE CO. WILL RUSH WORK

Wisconsin Telephone Company Expects To Have Underground System Completed In Two Weeks.

Excavation work in digging the trenches for the conduits to be used in the underground lines of the Wisconsin Telephone company's system in this city will soon be well under way. The work will be rushed as it is hoped to have it completed within two or three weeks and ready for the conduits. The conduits will be laid through about a mile of the streets in the business section of the city, and it is expected, will have a capacity sufficient to handle all the cables necessary for local service for some time to come. With the present size of cable used, 7200 pairs of wires can be laid in the street. The heavy poles now in use will be removed from the main streets as soon as the underground system of wiring is finished.

The conduits to be used have been placed in piles on the sidewalks, in various parts of the downtown section. Permission to do this was secured by the company's superintendent of construction, Mr. Brennan, from Mayor Carle. In some places where the sidewalk is narrow, but a few feet have been left for pedestrians and the conduits have been ordered away by the Chief of Police Appleby. A particular instance of this was furnished at the corner of Milwaukee and Main streets, near the Hayes block and between Main and River streets on Milwaukee Street.

Lord Loveland Discovers America

By C. N. AND A. M. WILLIAMSON

The girl glanced up for the first time, suddenly and as if startled. She had the air of having been deeply absorbed in her book and of not being sure that her neighbor had spoken to her; also she looked extremely young and innocent.

"I said what am I to do if Mr. James R. Smythe comes along and orders me out?" Val repeated.

"That's what I thought you said," replied the girl, meeting his admiring, quizzical eyes, with a somewhat bewildered yet defensive gaze. "But why should you say it to me?"

"Isn't that rather hard hearted of you?" asked Loveland.

"I don't understand you at all," said the girl. "You look like a gentleman, so I suppose you can't mean to be rude or impertinent. But if not you seem to be talking nonsense."

This was straightforward, to say the least, yet her voice was so sweet and girlish, with such a dainty little drawl in it, that the rebuke did not sound as severe as if spoken with sharper accents.

"Of course I don't mean to be rude or impertinent," Loveland defended himself, at a loss for the next move in the game. "But I thought—that is, I mean—you know, that is my chair, I'm delighted you should have it."

"Your chair?" echoed the girl. "Oh, you are mistaken. No wonder, if you thought that I—well, even then you couldn't have dreamed I'd take it on purpose."

"No, I—began Loveland, looking guilty.

Her eyes were on him. "You did think so?" she exclaimed. "I see you did. That was why you—and yet I don't see how you could have fancied I should know who you were unless—are you a very famous person?"

Lord Loveland laughed rather foolishly. "I think you've punished me enough," he said.

"Then you admit that you deserve to be punished?"

"Perhaps."

"Which means that you did believe I took your chair on purpose?"

"I didn't stop to think," said Loveland, telling the truth as usual, but less truculently than usual.

"You are English, aren't you?" the girl asked, looking at him with her brown, bewildering eyes.

"Oh, yes," replied Loveland in a tone which admitted, "of course."

"I was sure you were. I suppose you don't understand American girls very well or perhaps any girls yet. But, then, few men do really, except poets or novelists. And you're not a poet or a novelist?"

"Neither."

"You speak as though I'd asked if you were a pickpocket. Do you despise writers?"

"I'd be sorry to be one. Wouldn't you?" The girl laughed.

"I am one," she said. "I write stories."

"You're charming."

"No, I'm not. Why should you think so?"

"Oh, well, because you don't look as if you wrote."

"Thank you. I suppose you mean that for a compliment. But women who write aren't scarecrows nowadays, if they ever were."

"Well, anyhow, you're too young."

"I've been writing stories and getting them published, too, ever since I was sixteen. That's some years ago now. Please don't say you wouldn't have thought it. That would be too obvious even for an average American's idea of an average Englishman."

"As you thought," said Loveland, "I don't know much about American yet, I'm going over to the States to learn."

"The States? How English that sounds! We think we're all of America—all that's worth talking about is ordinary conversation. You thought I'd taken your chair. I believe you really did think that."

"I did," admitted Val.

"I wonder why. My aunt's name is on it."

"Oh!" said Loveland.

"See," went on the girl, leaning forward and displaying the label in the deck steward's handwriting.

"I do see," said Val. "But that happens to be my name."

"Loveland?"

"Yes."

The girl blushed brightly. And she was more attractive than ever when she blushed. "Oh, how very odd! This perhaps this is your chair. How perfectly 'horrid!' She began to 'unwind' herself from the rug which was wrapped round her as a chrysalis round an ineffectual butterfly.

"Please don't get up," Loveland's tone was almost imploring. "Do keep the chair. I want you to keep it."

"Thank you very much. But I don't want to keep it if it's yours, and I think now it probably is."

"But you expected to find yours here."

"No; it wasn't that. But as I was passing I saw my aunt's name on the back of a chair, and because the deck steward had been told to put one in a nice sheltered place I took it for granted that this was hers. I didn't know there was another Loveland on the passenger list."

"I noticed there was a Mrs. Loveland," said Val, "but didn't think much about it, as she wasn't likely to turn out a relative of mine. And my name isn't on the list. I came in the place of another man."

As he made this explanation, with a slight pause which meant the recollection of his promise to Jim Harbrough, Major Cadwallader Hunter went by, walking slowly, and, having long distance ears, heard as he passed. He was waiting for his chance to 'nobble' Lord Loveland, and afterward he remembered those few last words which he had caught.

"I'll go and look for the other Loveland chair," said the girl.

"You must do nothing of the sort," exclaimed Val.

"Oh, it's easy to see you're an Englishman. American men don't order us about like that."

Loveland laughed. "I didn't order you about. I ordered you to sit still."

"That's just as bad. You have the air of being used to give orders."

"I am. You see, I'm a soldier."

"Oh, what a relief! I began to be afraid you were a duke."

CHAPTER IV. HITHERTO IN RIGHT.

LOVELAND had the unusual sensation of feeling comparatively unimportant. When the girl came to find out who he was less than a duke. And if he had the air of being a duke who had the air of thinking no duke could possibly be superior to any self-respecting American.

As he reflected upon this extreme point of view a deck steward appeared and was summoned by the girl. She wished to know the situation of the second Loveland chair and which of the two was her aunt's, which the gentleman—Mr. Loveland's.

"Or ought I to speak of you as Captain Loveland?" she broke off to ask.

"I'm not a captain yet," answered Val. He did not explain that neither was he "Mr." He left her to discover that fact for herself by and by.

When the chair of Mrs. Loveland had been indicated, as it soon was by a tactless deck steward, the girl was obstinate in her determination to seek it. Val went with her, carrying the rug and the book, but as there was no vacant place on either side of the new chair he was obliged presently to go back to his own. And it was on the way back that Major Cadwallader Hunter's chance came.

"Lord Loveland, I see you don't remember me," he began, addressing himself to the younger man with an air of "shouldn't you know me?"

"I should have recognized you if I had seen you in the bend of his back and speaking in a low tone that his words might not be heard by any curious ears. Then he hurried on, "I am Major Cadwallader Hunter."

"Never heard the name in my life," said Loveland rudely. He thought that his uninvited companion looked like a bore, and he had never yet suffered a bore gladly. A flash of reflection told him that he possessed no envelope in Jim's or Betty's handwriting addressed to Major Cadwallader Hunter. The fellow would hardly be so mildly ingratiating if he were a millionaire with daughters to guard, and Val resented a trumped up claim of connection.

Cadwallader Hunter could swallow a snub with a smile, but never would he forgive the snubber.

He smiled now, but if Lord Loveland had not been Lord Loveland—

"I'm a distant relative of Jimmy Harbrough's," he explained, "and I generally run over to London for a few weeks in the season. Jim seems to be as popular on your side the water as on his own."

Loveland did not trouble himself to reply. If Jim had thought this alleged relative an interesting or profitable person for him to know, the name of Major Cadwallader Hunter would probably have been on one of the introduction envelopes.

Undismayed by the chilling silence, Cadwallader Hunter still walked by Lord Loveland's side and prattled. His next sentence hinted that he possessed in some degree the quality of clairvoyance.

"I suppose Jim's given you lots of letters," he continued, "but it's not likely there's one to me. I'm a mere bachelor and therefore must take a back place. Jim would naturally send you to married people with big houses of their own where they can entertain you. Still, in my own small way I can be useful to strangers and should be glad to be useful to you. I am, by the bye, a great admirer of your cousin, charming Lady Betty, and, if you'll allow me to say so, there's a strong family resemblance between you. If this is your first time on our side you don't know the ropes yet, and you must let me tell you anything you care to hear—about people, about places, about hotels. I can begin, for instance, by telling you who is who on this ship. There are several of our millionaires."

Loveland's handsome young face lost its frozen stare. He had taken a dislike to Cadwallader Hunter, but it was not so serious a dislike that he could not be useful to strangers and should be glad to be useful to you.
